THE OVERPRODUCTION PROBLEM

An editorial in American Forests for March says "After wrestling for many years with the problem of overproduction and its corollaries of slashing competition low lumber prices, timber waste and red ledgers; the lumber industry has petitioned the Federal Government for legislation permitting controlled production of its natural resources, under proper safeguards, along with coal and oil. The petition is in the form of a resolution passed on December 6 by the Board of Directors of the National Lumber Manufacturers association.

In view of the long and bitter opposition of the industry to any suggestion of federal control of its operations, the proposal comes as a distinct surprise. It is to be concluded that the leaders of the industry see in federal participation the only economic solution of a situation which threatens its permanent prosperity and its continuous supply of raw wood. The proposal having been made interest naturally turns to what will be the attitude of the federal government to the appeal of the lumberman.

Unquestionably the judgment of the Secretary of Agriculture, in whose department rests responsibility for the forest welfare of the nation, will largely dictate the government's policy in the event controlled production of lumber is undertaken. The editor of this magazine therefore asked Secretary William M. Jardine for his opinion of the proposal as a desirable public policy. His statement is an able presentation of the case from the standpoint of public interests. The secretary is sympathetic to the proposal but he rightly points out that controlled production of lumber can be justified as a desirable public undertaking only if it benefit the public. The secretary frankly admits that his department has no cure-all for the public and private agencies in arriving at a more complete understanding of the whole problem and in applying common sense remedies.

STOCK MARKET AMMUNITION

Despite efforts of the federal reserve to discourage speculation by hoisting the call money and rediscount rates, the orgy continues. It is fed by the enormous cash resources of the big insurance companies and the big corporate and individual fortunes, which thus thumb their derisive noses at government control.

Some check will be applied, but it will be agreed to by the moneyed interests not because but in spite of government efforts.

The era of the huge financial power is coming, as surely as the aerial age. Great companies, organized to produce or handle a commodity now pay fully as much attention to owning securities and participating in the swishing tides of finance as they do the work for which they were formed. The present list of industrial giants will succeed the banking interests in the control of finance.

An Indiana judge has ruled that gangsters may carry pistols on their own front porches. Now if they will stay there with them—

"Matter" is the subject of the Lesson - Sermon today in all churches of Christ Scientist branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon includes the following from the Bible: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world..." For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever" (1 John 2:15-17).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Entirely separate from the belief and dream of material living, is the life divine, revealing spiritual understanding and the consciousness of man's dominion over the whole earth" (p. 14).

DEEP WATER TO BE SOUGHT ON HARBOR

The city of Richmond plans a comprehensive program designed to attract new industries during the next year, according to an announcement by the Chamber of Commerce.

Two outstanding projects having a bearing on this objective are the dredging of the river and outer harbor and a development of the Cutting Canal.

Plans now being discussed call for completion at an early date of the dredging program on both waterways whereby new deep water will be created and new turning basins will be established that will help to attract more and larger vessels to Richmond harbor.

According to the chamber of commerce report it is likely that steps will be taken in the near future toward entering into an agreement between the city of Richmond and the federal government whereby this dredging will be started to completion.

Early action is expected on the development of the Cutting Canal, the reconstruction of new areas for industrial purposes, and the widening of deep water, steps clear up to Cutting boulevard. This project will mean the addition of many new acres of land to Richmond's industrial map and will give industries an excellent location with rail, water and highway connections at their doors.

Development of Eastshore Park into a new industrial zone will proceed as rapidly as possible, according to announcement by Fred D. Parr, president of the Parr Richmond Terminal corporation, whose company recently purchased this land from the Key Security Transport company. According to Parr, there will be some slight delay in connection with developing the Eastshore park in its entirety, inasmuch as some of the concession holders have contracts and cannot be disturbed until these contracts have expired.

Portions of the park are already available for the location of industries, and Parr and his scouts have already had a number of interviews in the bay region and in the east with the object of locating industries there.

PLYMOUTH CAR PLANT OPEN TO PUBLIC

The new Plymouth auto manufacturing plant, at Lynch Road, and Mt. Elliot Ave., Detroit, has been thrown open to the inspection of visitors interested in the most modern methods of motor car production, according to word received here by Harry Curry, Richmond Chrysler-Plymouth dealer.

This huge manufacturing plant is only recently placed in operation. It is one of the most modern and completely equipped in the country. It occupies 23 acres of floor space and is the largest single floor structure of its kind in the country. The plant itself is 2,490 feet long and with the forty acre plot on which it stands represents an investment of over $10,000,000.

Due to the single floor plan it has been made possible, through the use of twelve miles of conveyor machinery to produce 1,000 cars a day, when operations are on a single shift basis and 2,000 cars on a two-shift basis.

Two thousand nine hundred and forty individual machine tools, all operating under their own motor power, perform the myriad of functions necessary to make the various parts of the engines, control and running gear.

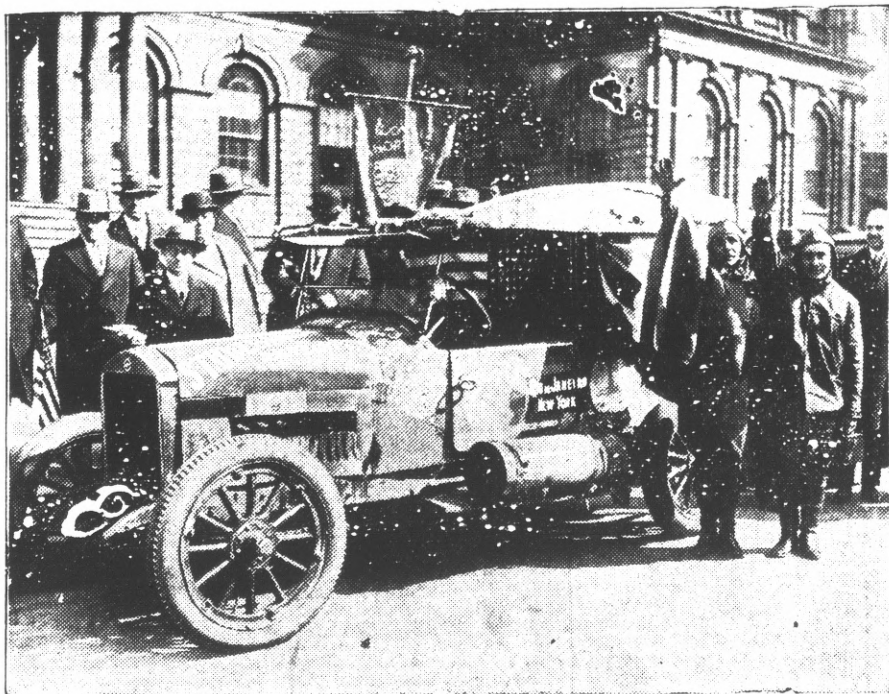

One hundred tons of standard steel were used to construct the ovens in which fenders are enameled. There are 200 running-in stands to handle the engines that are constantly being tested prior to installation in their chassis.

So perfectly is the plant laid out and the work of the employees arranged that there is no evidence of unusual hurry and bustle, no sign of confusion or of wasted movements. In addition to the manufacturing plant the building has a completely equipped kitchen, cafeteria, dining room and hospital. Specially equipped lunch wagons have also been installed which run through the plant conveying food to the employees.

Use Potato In Battery Tests

It often happens that the novice motorist cannot distinguish between the positive and negative wires on a car. The free emergency road service of the California State Automobile association suggests that a simple test is to hold the ends of each wire about one inch apart and insert them in a raw potato. The wire that shows green is positive.

Completes Long Journey

COMPLETING the first 10,000-mile automobile journey from Buenos Aires to New York Jose Mario Barone, ex-Italian aviator and his companion Alfredo Massi reached New York City March 1, in their 1922 Studebaker. Barone made the entire trip under the most exciting and perilous conditions. Three of his mechanics died on the way, one from fever and two from violence. His car was thrown 150 feet off a mountain by a landslide.

League Of Nations Makes Report On Mechanical Signals

In speaking of the necessity for suitable mechanical signaling devices, the National Automobile club calls attention to the following report:

"The League of Nations Committee for Communications and Transit has recommended that any such device should fulfill the following conditions:

It should signal a stop or change of direction in sufficient time and in a clear and distinct manner.

A signal indicating change of direction should be visible from both front and rear.

All signals should be visible both day and night.

The driver should at all times be able to operate the signals from his seat.

Many States To Revise Codes

That there is a general awakening throughout the nation to the need for traffic safety legislation is evidenced in the fact that legislatures in many states are considering street and highway laws. Reports to the California State Automobile association show that most states are planning adoption of the uniform traffic code based on the California vehicle act.

HAND SIGNALS BY DRIVERS URGED

Use of proper arm signals to cut down the toll of automobile accidents on California's streets and highways, which last year claimed 1800 lives, is urged by the Safety conference of the California Development association as part of its all year educational campaign.

Nearly 20 percent of all automobile accidents are caused by improper arm signals, according to the conference, which is devoting the month of March to stress the necessity for proper signals in driving and turning.

"Arm signals are used properly by only twenty-five percent of automobile drivers," says Mrs. Lytle, vice chairman, Juvenile Educational committee of the safety conference, with which traffic officials and 27,000 women of California are cooperating. "This great neglect is contributing heavily to the daily toll of automobile accidents throughout the state. Statistics show that the life of one person out of every five killed in automobile accidents can be traced to improper observance of arm signals."

Five essential rules of section 130 of the Motor Vehicle Act were cited by Mrs. Lytle to insure safety to the driver of an automobile and the following machines. These are:

1. A motorist must first look to see if a turn can be made in safety; if not he must wait.
2. Before starting, turning or stopping, a plainly visible signal must be given to all drivers who may reasonably be affected.
3. All arm signals must be made from the left side of the vehicle.
4. Arm signals must be given continuously for the last fifty feet before turning.
5. For a right turn—hand and arm straight up. For a left turn—hand and arm straight out; and for a stop or slowing movement—hand and arm straight down.

"Observance of these rules," Mrs. Lytle continued "will help to cut down the heavy loss of life and property through motor vehicle accidents. Constant alertness and intelligent use of arm signals will go a long way toward decreasing traffic accidents which are a blot upon the records of our state."

STUDEBAKER RESERVE POWER LAUDED BY L. J. THOMAS

The reserve power and strength built into Studebaker motors and chassis are reflected in the versatility of Studebaker products in the commercial field, according to L. J. Thomas, Studebaker-Erskine dealer here. "Comparatively few of the motorists who drive Studebaker cars are aware of the fact that the same features of performance and reliability that led to their choice of Studebaker transportation are responsible for Studebaker's outstanding position in the commercial car field," Thomas declared.

"Studebaker is one of the three largest producers of busses in the United States. It is the largest producer of funeral cars and ambulances and sales of Studebaker delivery cars have shown a steady increase since their introduction a short time ago. Studebaker chassis are also widely used for the severe demands of fire fighting equipment as well as specialized fleets of police work."

"Though Studebaker has been active in the bus and commercial field for only a little more than three years, Studebaker busses, ambulances and delivery fleets are in operation all over the world. One of the largest stores in Buenos Aires operates a fleet of fast Studebaker delivery cars. In Norway, a large fleet of Studebaker busses is operated out of Oslo.

"Some of the longest routes in the British Isles are covered by Studebaker busses and the same thing is true in far off Australia where operating conditions are generally so severe as to require the most powerful and dependable type of equipment."

"A recent summary of Studebaker bus operations in the United States disclosed that nearly 400 busses had piled up mileage records of more than 100,000 miles apiece. One operator in Butler, Pennsylvania, reported that a unit of his fleet has covered 130,000 miles before it had to go to the shop for complete overhauling.

"No more analytical buyers exist than the men who buy motor cars for municipal governments. They demand proof of performance, and their selections are

Car Asseccory Values Grow

The value of rubber tires for automobile replacements last year was sixty-seven million dollars, reports the California State Automobile association and parts accessories and service equipment were worth ninety-five million dollars.

usually made on the basis of rigid competitive tests. That Studebaker has been particularly successful in meeting the high standards imposed for this class of service is indicated in the number of municipalities using fleets of Studebaker busses, fire apparatus, police patrols and passenger cars.

"The outstanding success of Studebaker products in the commercial field is added proof of the soundness of Studebaker engineering as applied to the far less severe demands of passenger car operation."

Movies Aid In Getting Good Roads For City

The residents of a small English town, had tried for a period of three years to convince the town fathers of the acute necessity for ironing out the numerous chuckholes which seriously impeded motor traffic through the city's streets. The inconclusive town fathers, remained obdurate to all pleadings and petitioning, until the irate citizens boldly threatened to show the unpardonable condition of the various thoroughfares, these pictures to be released throughout the country as a warning for all motorists to accept a voluntary detour around the town rather than subject themselves and their cars to unduly rough treatment.

Although a rich or lean mixture may effect the operation of a motor in various ways, says L. G. Evans, general service manager, National Automobile club, they have one result in common—the undue overheating of the engine.

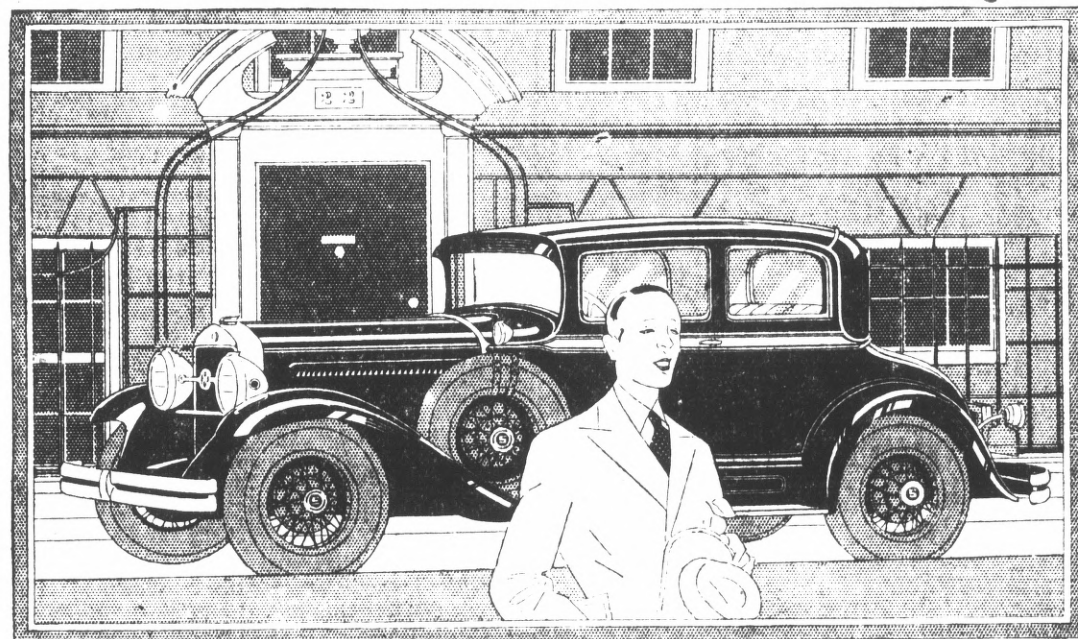

On level ground, states L. G. Evans, general service manager, National Automobile club the well lubricated car whose brakes are not sticking, should be fairly easy to roll by hand. If such is not the case, lubrication, brakes and tire pressure should be checked.

SOUND EFFECT TELLS TRUE STORY

Talking pictures do more than bring the voices of the players to the screen.

One of their most important features is the making audible of all the sounds that would naturally be heard if the spectators were present on the scene of action. These sounds used to be known as "sound effects," but with the advent of Paramount all-talking pictures, in which every foot of film is synchronized with the recording apparatus at the time of filming, they become natural sounds.

This was demonstrated at the Paramount studios recently during the making of "The Doctor's Secret," a 100 percent talking production featuring Ruth Chatterton, H. B. Warner, John Loder and Robert Edson. At one of the most dramatic moments of the story, an automobile accident takes place in a crowded London street. In order to film the event, cables were strung from the sound stage on the Paramount lot in Hollywood to a nearby street. All of the sounds set up in the street, the shuffling of many feet, the rumble of an omnibus, the screech of brakes, the cries of the people, were picked up in the sensitive microphones suspended overhead and transmitted over the cables to the recording apparatus on the sound stage.

"The Doctor's Secret" will be shown at the Fox-California theater today and tomorrow.

Both Walker and Loughran are in fine shape. Loughran has been training here for some time but Walker arrived only today. Mickey will weigh around 165 pounds when he attempts to take Loughran's title and Tommy expects to be close to the 175 pound light heavyweight limit.

STYOPSIS
On an Antarctic expedition Simon Overton is lost. His friend, Arthur Faunce, returns and proposes to Diane Herford, whom both loved, and marries her. Faunce arranges another expedition. Then Overton returns and, inadvertently, reveals his love to Diane and part of the true story. Overton wants to conceal Faunce's cowardice for Diane's sake. Tortured by this thought, Faunce confesses to Diane that he became panic-stricken and deserted Overton to save himself. Diane's father arranges a divorce and then Diane rejects the idea and returns to Faunce. Overton, offered command of the new expedition, returns again for Diane's sake. Overton sees Diane.

"Don't speak to me like that," she exclaimed. "Don't bring it back. Let's forget it, let's forget there was ever a moment when we seemed so near to each other. I didn't try to palliate it, and I don't mean to. I've got to suffer for it. I told them the truth, resigned my command, and saw that it was given to Overton. He's been made to accept it. The evening papers say the story—you'll find it there in all its details."

"Of course, I know how you feel—that I hadn't the right to disgrace you. That's been Overton's argument. When he came back, I thought that the misery I'd endured was over, that the whole thing would come out, and—since he was alive—I had only to face the humiliation and begin life again. But he shocked me; he insisted on silence to save you. He saved me until I felt that I was no better than his slave, subject to his dictates, and I knew he loved you! It was intolerable. It's best for a man to suffer his punishment, and I'm going to take mine. But you—his voice broke suddenly. "I've thought of you all day, and I've come here to-night, Diane, to tell you that I can't ask you to bear my shame. I couldn't endure to see you unhappy. I'd—I'd rather set you free!"

She lifted her head then and met his eyes, and hers were beautiful. "But—suppose I won't take it, suppose I wouldn't take it if I could?"

He turned with a poignant gesture and sank into a chair. "I've no right to pull you down. I know how you despise my—my cowardice!"

"Yes," she replied steadily. "I did; but now, Arthur, can't you see that you have done a very brave thing? You've paid—in your heart's blood—for it; you've given him what's more to you than your life—your hopes, your ambition, your reputation?"

She stopped for a moment; then she took a step nearer and stood looking at him.

"I can't tell you," she went on. "How thankful I am—how thankful that you've done it, that you've atoned, and as you say, that you're free—free to begin again, to live it all down!"

As he turned his head slowly and looked up, her face changed and flushed deeply. "I—your coming back saved me," he said in a voice that thrilled with feeling. "I wanted to kill myself, but you came back to me, and in some way—I can't tell you, but as simply as the coming of daybreak, the change came into my heart. But I've had one thing to torture me, to drive me on—I've felt—Diane, do you love him still?"

She came slowly toward him and knelt beside his chair, lifting her eyes steadily to his.

"I thought I did, and there was one when I was away from you—that I was tempted. I thought my happiness lay that way, but now—"

He bent over her, his hands clasped here and held, his eyes searched hers and he whispered hoarsely.

"Now I know that you've explained it to me, that you've come back to me—in the ambulance that I know and—"

She paused, and a beautiful look came into her face, a look of such tenderness, such faith, that it touched him to the soul, he would have drawn her closer, clasped her in his arms, but her eyes still held his and he waited until she went on softly, with infinite gentleness: "You're my husband—that, Arthur, the bond that I couldn't break."

Diane awoke the next morning with a sensation that was so new, so real. She felt at peace—at peace with herself and with the world. She was willing now to accept her share of the public disgrace, even her share of the unpleasant notoriety that was sure to come to Faunce. It was the price of his redemption. It was the price of his return to the semblance that she had loved, and she was willing to pay it.

SHIPS, PLANES IN SIEGE ON MAZATLAN

Earlier in the day the president received a report from General Calles that 5000 cavalrymen under General Sanguino had been ordered from Toluca to Mazatlan, Jalisco, to engage the rebels there.

Calles informed the president that he will concentrate at Mazatlan, advancing from the north and northwest. Meanwhile General Almazan's division is preparing to march overland from Hermosillo toward Chihuahua City.

Railroad Destroyed
The rebels have rendered the Chihuahua railway line useless by destroying 150 kilometers of track, Calles reported, and along 10 kilometers of the right of way only the embankments were left.

The first troops enroute to Mazatlan to reinforce the garrison there, Calles reported, should have been at Tepic, Nayarit, this morning. General Cardenas and his entire division will be in readiness to advance from Tepic toward Mazatlan Tuesday.

Reports from Mazatlan indicate the troops of Gen. Jaime Carrillo, in command of the federal forces there, number approximately 2000, whereas the invading and attacking forces are estimated at from 3000 to 3500.

REBEL LEADERS SHORT OF FUNDS

EL PASO, March 23 (UP)—An authoritative address reaching here today from Chihuahua and Coahuila, Mexico, said the revolutionist leaders were running short of money and ammunition.

General J. Gonzalez Escobar, commander in chief of the rebel armies, probably could raise 20,000 civilian troops in the two states, the address said. He was able to equip them. He has no more guns in reserve, however, and it is doubtful if he can arm

First Baptist To Burn Notes At Services

At tonight's services at the First Baptist church, an unusual ceremony will be featured in the burning of three notes which have been paid on the building since its one year of occupancy. The sum that was not covered at the time of dedication.

During the year this sum has been raised and paid by the members in addition to greatly increased running expenses and in addition to other loans. Consequently, the burning of the notes will be a source of real rejoicing among the members who have worked so hard to clear the debt.

Another attraction on the program will be four Marimba Duets by the Sandin Brothers of radio fame.

People Enthusiastic
People of both states, it was added, are enthusiastic about the revolutionary movement and feel that it is successful. It will better their condition considerably.

General Calles has about 30,000 troops which are scattered over a wide territory to guard against the threatened rear and flanks of his main army.

Orderly Uprising
"So far the revolution has been an orderly uprising against what the rebels call 'tyranny.' Property and life generally have been safe."

General Escobar pays his men daily in cash. As a consequence they are not forced to loot as in many previous revolutions.

"Provinces of war are treated as such. As far as known there have been no executions under General Escobar's command. Americans and other foreigners are treated with courtesy."

12 BOY SCOUTS REPORTED RESCUED

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., March 23.—UP—Two were drowned, seven others are missing and believed drowned and 12 of the Boy Scouts who were on the roof of Tarwater bungalow at White Creek were rescued, Hammond Fowler, publisher of the Knoxville News-Sentinel, said today.

The bodies of Jim T. Wright, of Rockwood, a prominent young business man and scout master of troop 45, and Ed Burnett, Jr., were found at three p. m. a mile from where the Tarwater bungalow was swept away in the flood early today. The two bodies were found in driftwood.

The Boy Scouts missing are Fred Burnett, Jack Schumacher, Roy Green, Lawrence Montgomery and Woodrow Kerr. Search has been made for them along both banks of the Emory river, from the scene of the bungalow to the Tennessee river.

No trace of the five boys has been found and it is generally believed they were drowned.

Levees Threaten To Crumble As Farmers Flee

QUINCY, Ill., March 23.—UP—Levees were threatening to crumble at several points along a 20 mile Mississippi river front in Illinois tonight, despite the heroic efforts of townspeople and state troops to keep them intact.

Farmers were evacuating the lowlands as the waters of the big river swelled over its banks and flooded rich farms, many of them already planted with spring crops.

The highest mark since 1851 was attained today when the water gauge registered 29.5 feet, a rise of six inches in 24 hours.

Waraw, Quincy and the Lima district in Illinois and Keokuk, Iowa, were considered the danger points in the river's rampage.

Mrs. H. Newcomb Dies At Livermore

Word of the death of Mrs. Herbert Newcomb of Livermore, mother of Mrs. Maud Harris of Richmond, was received yesterday. Funeral services will be held at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the Reimer chapel in Livermore. Mrs. Newcomb was a former resident of Oakland.

RAIN ADDING TO FLOODS IN SOUTH

Georgia, whose residents have been battling the ravages of high water for more than a week.

The Mississippi river was spilling over onto farm lands in the neighborhood of Quincy, Illinois, as volunteers worked feverishly to support its levees with sand bags.

Alarming Reports
Alarming reports came from the Cumberland valley around Pineville, Ky., and from the Emory river system in central Tennessee.

Without warning the flood descended upon Pineville Saturday morning, driving whole families to the hills back of the town, washing out railroad tracks and inundating highways. From Lexington came a dispatch saying that a Louisville and Nashville passenger train was believed to have been marooned or carried away by the high waters between Noon and Hazard.

Train Overdue
The train was nearly 12 hours overdue at Hazard when all lines of communication with the town were disrupted by the water.

Business houses in lower Pineville were inundated and Hazard was reported to have been one of the hardest hit of all the communities in the valley.

Refugees carrying bundles of valuables over their shoulders were hating to higher ground throughout this section of the Cumberland valley and the valley of its tributary Greasy Creek.

Directly south, residents of central Tennessee were battling against the intrusion of flood waters from the Emory river and its branches in Roane county but with little success.

Boy Scouts Lost
At Tarwater, six miles south of Rockford, a troop of 28 Boy Scouts was swept down White Creek on the roof of the bungalow where they had taken refuge as the water crept up on their camp.

Mothers and fathers on banks of the stream were reported to have stood by helplessly within earshot of the cries of their sons. Volunteers rescued the boys down stream in boats brought overland from the Tennessee river.

That William H. Short of Pittsburg came to his death from a blow on his head, inflicted by parties of a party unknown, was the verdict of a coroner's jury in Pittsburg recently. Immediate cause of the death was a fractured skull, the jury decided.

Short was found in a vacant lot in Pittsburg on the night of March 13. A. C. Ringel, who is being held by the Pittsburg police in connection with the death, testified that he was in San Francisco on the night of the murder.

Coroner Aubrey Wilson conducted the inquest.

CREW RESCUED AS 'RUNNER' IS SUNK

The Dexter while the Walcott bore the body of the sole victim, a negro seaman, who was drowned in boarding lifeboats launched by the "I'm Alone" when disaster was imminent.

Belief that the British schooner with headquarters at Belize, Honduras, was engaged in illicit traffic, other than in drugs and liquor was generally expressed in federal government circles. The resistance shown by the "I'm Alone" crew was the principal factor indicating that the smuggling of aliens was included in the repertoire of the crew's lawlessness, it was said.

El Dorado county's motor vehicle registration at the beginning of this year totaled 2,706, reports the California State Automobile association. Of this total 2,181 were passenger cars.
